Dear Mr. Weisberg:

I just finished reading "Whitewash." You did a good job.

Maybe you can answer a question for me that has been on my mind ever since the assassination. I thought you might refer to it in your book but I didn't notice it: Why did Oswald go home after the assassination?
Considering that it was shortly after noon he seems to have left in the middle of the normal workday, even though he had lunch at the depository.

If you can give me the answer, or refer me to a certain portion of your book, I'll appreciate it.

A stamped-self-addressed envelope is enclosed.

Very truly yours,

Marvin Rothenstein
